CRREL nominated as best at 78th MORS Symposium

CRREL's presentation during the 78th Military Operations Research Society Symposium was nominated as the best presentation in the Operational Environments category. The symposium was hosted by the U.S. Marine Corps Combat Development Command, Quantico, VA.

The presentation, 'Optimal Placement of Sensors with Terrain –based Coverage Preferences and Placement Constraints', focused on providing the War Fighter with the automated placement of sensors for the most reliable and efficient return on investment.

The three-member team of Sergey Vecherin, Chris Petit and Dr. Keith Wilson, are now being considered for the symposium's Richard H. Barchi Prize.
